QUEER QUERIES

Some few weeks ago we were in a humble mood and confided to our readers that we desired them to furnish us information on a variety of topics concerning which our own knowledge was somewhat deficient. We expected to be deluged with replies betraying the intelligence of our perusing clientele. But our "Constant Readers" and "Pro Bono Publicos" maintained an inexplicable silence. Did they think we were too inquisitive? Or that our communal state was so normal as to provide no ground for wonder or query?

Our good friend who chuckles his column off every week in our Montreal contemporary misconstrued our guileless questioning as evidence of our intention to poach on his preserve of calm calumny. And knowing that the world slaps its jesters, he hastily warned us off his field. May we thankfully assure him that it was very far from our mind to attempt to compete with him in his own domain? And we know full well that he is even provided with a successor—a very estimable successor indeed.

Will we be pardoned if we still evince a craving for information and explanations anent some peculiar phases of our communal life? And the implied humility on our part should be refreshing.

Q.—Is the local "Young Judaea" organization a ward of the Zionist Organization or of the Agudath Israel? When Ahad Ha'am lay seriously ill during the last week of his life, the authorities of Tel-Aviv closed up his street and diverted all traffic in order not to disturb the eminent patient. The local Young Judaea sends out cards warning motor cars away from the vicinity of the Zionist Institute on Friday evenings during the course of its lectures. Who is the eminent patient in this case?

Q.—Will the University Avenue Synagogue expect as much religiousness from its new Rabbi as does the local Talmud Torah from its teachers or the Zionist Organization from its executive directors?

Q.—How did our local Polish Jews manage to settle their differences of opinion about the merits of Rabbi Graubart's latest book without going to court over it?

Q.—Why did the authorities of the Talmud Torah neglect to add up for ready reference the sums given by the pillars of local education which are so prominently displayed on the walls in the lobby? No doubt the children who come to the seat of Hebrew learning are interested to know exactly how much each "baleboss" gave on his own behalf and on behalf of his relatives. Did it not occur to the modest directors that photographs of the donors would go well with the names and amounts? And why not paint large display signs on the walls outside, so that still more people might be inspired by the information?

And now who else will fall in line with the one discriminating man who, in our hearing, offered to one of the officials a substantial amount for the Talmud Torah if his name were erased from the publicity column in the lobby, and a further sum if all the other names were similarly erased?

Q.—Has not the Toronto Menorah Society won some sort of world's championship by holding three full debates including rebuttals in one evening?

TEMPLE EMANU-EL'S RABBI-ELECT

By RABBI FERDINAND M. ISSERMAN

Rabbi Harry J. Stern, of Uniontown, Pa., a graduate of the Hebrew Union College, has been elected rabbi of Temple Emanu-el of Montreal to fill the pulpit left vacant by the late Rabbi Herbert Samuel. Rabbi Stern, who was a classmate of mine, is particularly fitted to work in a community like Montreal. Though liberal in his religious outlook, he has had orthodox religious backgrounds. He will win for Temple Emanu-El many friends among the orthodox elements of the city. Rabbi Stern has been for many years an active Zionist. While a student he organized a branch of the intercollegiate Zionist society at the University of Cincinnati.

For five years Rabbi Stern has served the Uniontown Jewish community. There he has won the respect and love not only of his own congregation, but of all classes in his city. He comes to Montreal with a record of splendid service which I feel certain will be continued. Temple Emanu-El is to be congratulated on its rabbi-elect. Under his leadership, it should continue to make constructive contributions to the Jewish and spiritual life of Montreal. Mazel tov!

THE PROTESTS AGAINST ROUMANIA

A few weeks after a meeting was held in Toronto protesting against Roumania's maltreatment of her minorities, Jews, Catholics, Unitarians and Baptists, I received a letter from the Roumanian legation at Washington informing me that the leading rabbi of Roumania and a member of its senate had requested the Jews of the world to cease protesting against Roumania's atrocities against the Jews. Such protests were not improving but harming the lot of the Jews in Roumania. Subsequently, it appeared from the Jewish press that the rabbi had not been correctly quoted. But granting that he had, it means nothing. There is nothing else that the rabbi could have done. Living as he does in Roumania, what could he have done but yield to the pressure which certainly was brought to bear on him to issue a protest against the rending of the veils which conceal Roumania's villainy?

The Roumanian government does not want to stand before the bar of public opinion accused of practices which every civilized country shuns. But such accusations cannot be whitewashed by silencing one or two Jewish leaders. I too do not want to see Roumania depicted as a villain among nations. I too loathe to see a nation accused of injustice and bigotry. But nations which desire the respect of the world must earn that respect. The Jews who protest are not indignant over fancied grievances. They are trying to rouse the conscience of the world against a nation which has violated its treaty pledges in respect to minorities and which is emulating the methods of the late czars in its disregard of the rights of Jews and others. These Jewish protests will cease when Roumania's mediaeval policy ceases. If Roumania has regard for her reputation, let her disown her bigots and anti-Semites, let her give all the minorities in her borders the rights and privileges of all men. Let her open her university to all who are willing to learn. Let her

RABBI MERRITT, OF PORTLAND, RESIGNS

Dr. Max J. Merritt, rabbi of Congregation Beth Israel, Portland, Ore., since September 1, 1925, has presented his resignation to the Board of Trustees, effective at a date to be fixed by agreement with the board. Rabbi Merritt indicated that his decision to retire from the pulpit here was based on a desire to join his wife and three children, who have been in London for some time past settling up the estate of a near relative. Rabbi Merritt came from Temple Emanuel in Montreal to succeed Dr. Jonah B. Wise, who had been with Congregation Beth Israel for more than twenty years. Dr. Merritt represented Congregation Beth Israel at the convention of the Union of American Hebrew Congregations in Cleveland.

GOOD TEA NOT CHEAPER

Because old and poor bulk tea can be purchased to-day rather cheaply, the public should not think they will get satisfaction by buying it. Cheap tea is a most expensive luxury.

BARON DE HIRSCH BOOK CLUB

Israel Zangwill's place in Jewish life and English letters was defined at a memorial meeting in honour of the author of "The Children of the Ghetto" Sunday, March 5, at the Baron de Hirsch Book Club rooms. The event was the first of its kind locally since the death of the writer a short time ago. A. J. Livinson, chairman, gave a sketch of Zangwill's life. Lazarus Phillips pointed out that Zangwill was the first leading publicist writing in English who devoted himself to a consideration of Jewish life in the Diaspora. Ben Bernstein, who presented a critical study of Zangwill's plays, made clear that his fame did not rest on the stage. Michael Garber discussed Zangwill as a humorist. R. H. Blumenthal, honorary president of the Book Club, thanked the speakers.

WEDDINGRockstein—Ofshister

The marriage of Miss Rose Ofshister, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Ofshister, to Isidore Rockstein, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Rockstein, was solemnized, Sunday, February 6, at Annex Hall Rabbi Slatkine officiating. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of white georgette trimmed with sequins and beads.
 Her veil of white net was arranged in cop effect with knots of orange blossoms.
 She carried white roses and lilies-of-the-valley. The maid-of-honour, Miss Lottie Levine, wore white georgette trimmed with beads, with a hat to match, and carried a bouquet of pink roses. Joe Coleman was best man. The bridesmaids were Misses Dora Lazarovitch, in a gown of pink georgette trimmed with flowers; Florence Saigin, peach colour georgette beaded; Bessie Rohrlick, green taffeta with net; and Gertie Rockstein, sister of the groom, Nile green beaded georgette. All carried American Beauty roses. Groomsmen were Jack Jacobson, Sam Carolsky, Eli Rosen and Ben Trister. The flower girls, Ruthie Hornstein and Sarah Rosenfeld, wore frocks of white georgette and carried baskets of rose petals. Solie Levine, page boy, wore a tuxedo suit.
 The train bearer was Bella Lerman, who wore a frock of white georgette trimmed with ribbon. Mrs. David Ofshister, mother of the bride, wore fawn cut velvet with a corsage of American Beauty roses. Mrs. Joseph Rockstein, mother of the groom, wore black satin trimmed with georgette with a corsage of American Beauty roses. A reception was held for 350 guests. From out of town were Mr. and Mrs. M. Goldberg, of Philadelphia, and Miss Rose Galkin, of Mount Vernon, N.Y.

Every Friday

There are five Jewish boys from Toronto in the reformatory at Mimico. There are also five Jewish boys from Hamilton at Mimico and Hamilton's Jewish population is about one-eighth as large as Toronto's Jewish population. But Toronto has done something in preventive work in juvenile delinquency. Six years ago Jewish delinquency in Toronto was twice as high as it normally should have been. To-day it is below what the Jewish population is entitled to. Hamilton has no recreational or adequate character-building facilities for boys and the result is what might be expected. Hamilton appears to have everything else: synagogues, Hebrew schools, drives, bazaars, campaigns that take young fortunes in money outside the city to the neglect of many vital needs at the door-step. Is any one of these things more important than the question of juvenile delinquency due largely to lack of proper recreation?

A community is criminally careless which does not consider how the child's hours out of school should be spent, winter and summer. The movies, radio, automobile, dance hall, sidewalks may furnish entertainment, often of a dubious sort, but they can hardly be called recreation. The street gang starts out a bunch of boys as ready to get into good as to get into bad. It plays ball in some corner, plays tricks on grown-ups, usually harmless tricks, destroys property, though not maliciously, breaks windows, runs into sidewalk displays or pushcarts "accidentally," steals fruit—always for the want of something, almost anything, to do. If wholesome recreation is not provided, the route to the organized mature gang is pretty direct: The small thief is a crook now and the increase of violent crime careers among the teen-age distresses the community.

For the community in general, schools should be the natural centres of recreation for children and adults after hours. For the Jewish community which has no special centre building there are the synagogues. A synagogue usually gets far too little use in proportion to what it costs. It is convenient, large, warm and light. Put an expert play director in charge, one who can teach folk songs, games and dances, who can show a boy how to build book shelves, who knows just the play for a group to give and can direct it and tell the girls how to make the costumes; one who can sing, fly a kite or tell mother why the stuff wouldn't sell. An expert play director knows a million things or will hunt up information for the young ones and impart it enthusiastically. Such a director costs money. So does more electricity, more heat, more janitor service, more upkeep on the property. But if these are expensive, ill-used leisure and the misery it brings are also costly in terms of money and then some. Directed play and recreation for the hours after work and school must cost money. Well, what of it? Trustees, officials and boards of directors can find money for everything else under the canopy, Silence surrounds the Joint Distribution Campaign results in Toronto. Such go-getters extraordinary as headquarters sent out from New York to get money for the relief of starving Jews in Europe have long since disappeared and local community leaders who had anything to do with the business are not bragging. The $75,000 quota could not inspire more than $40,000. Any rapid-fire campaign will produce a lot of night-blooming or club-luncheon-blooming flowerets which are radiantly showy during the mere mention of money and then wither up when it comes time to pay. Therefore a $75,000 campaign, making allowance for these gradually fading blossoms of the community garden, should do much better than a measly $40,000 in pledges. But the J. D. C. campaign in Toronto was hopelessly bungled and if there is too little money to show for a cause which has elicited millions from the Jews of this country, it is not that Toronto Jews can not be appealed to but because of bad campaign management.

In other cities where there were Jewish papers these papers were employed for advertising the approaching drive weeks in advance. In Toronto the Jewish public as a whole didn't even know that an appeal was upon them at the time. Then, panic-stricken, a number of men responsible for the campaign met and decided to spend $1,000 for advertising in the daily papers. It would be illuminating to know just how little in contributions that last-minute, hectic action actually produced for the cause. But there are always communal leaders who want their community enterprises in the daily papers because it tickles their vanity, even though it costs money, and because they fancy it impresses their personal business acquaintances among the Gentiles. Any Gentiles who gave to the drive would have given anyway because of Jewish business connections. To try to reach Jews for a Jewish cause through papers which naturally enough go chiefly to Gentiles, is to spend money with the discretion of a drunken sailor.

The fate of the Joint Distribution Campaign in Toronto should be long remembered here for several lessons it teaches. One of these is that the only efficacious mediums for advertising campaigns and communal undertakings in the larger Canadian Jewish centres are their Jewish papers. It is a bare statement of fact to say that no local campaign can ever be put over in proper style without them.

RELIEF WORK OF FEDERATION

The family relief work of the Federation for January and February has been unusually heavy. Over $7,600 was expended, in addition to 2,747 quarts of milk and 146 half tons of coal. One hundred and fifty-nine different families received assistance, of whom 110 received help in both months. Although the Family Welfare Bureau is budgeted for $3,000 a month, it was compelled, because of the large number of families to be helped, to go beyond its budget over $1,200 each month. Of the total Federation receipts of $14,000 for the first two months of 1927, almost 60 per cent. was spent for relief.

The Silent Gittel—An Empty Life

By MATILDA BENNETT, London, England

Gittel, the childless one, stood at the little window watching the retreating figure of her husband, Gershon, the peddler. She watched him turning the corner of the quaint, dull, poverty-stricken street in which they lived.

Gershon had been home for Rosh Hashonah, and was now going away until Chanukah. He only came home at the festivals and went away again immediately after they were over.

Gittel's brown eyes were heavy and sad. Her pale features looked drawn, as with pain. And her thin lips were tightly compressed. For a long while she stood by the window quite motionless. Then she sat down on a chair by the table. The blood rushed to her head, and her temples throbbed fiercely. She felt that she could not move. A powerful wave of loneliness, dark as night and almost as crushing as death, closed over her, leaving her weak and helpless.

Each time Gershon went away, Gittel sank more deeply into the quicksands of lethargy and depression. The little house she used to take such pride in when she first came into it no longer interested her. And, at times, because of these fits of excessive brooding, she neglected not only the house but herself as well. She scarcely ate anything, for the simple reason that she did not want to exert herself to cook the food. And, whenever she had the impulse to do something, she would check it, and sit sadly, the tears streaming from her eyes. "For whom am I going to work—for whom? Who is there to say to me: 'It is good, it is nice?'"

It was only when Gershon was at home that something of her old self returned. Her love of housekeeping revived, and she found pleasure in everything she did.

Although Gershon took very little notice of her work, she nevertheless made the house look as nice as possible for his coming, as a sort of welcome to him.

In the early days of their married life, when Gittel used to complain of her great loneliness to Gershon, he used to say to her cheerfully:

"What? Little fool, what are you short of? Would you like to be like me—in a different place every day? Soon you will get to know the people of the town. It will be all right; I tell you it will be all right." And he would comfort her by adding that it would not be so bad for her always. "With whom then are children? With the father? Not of course not! They are with the mother. And then life is different—quite another sort of life then."

His restless brown eyes looked happy and full of contentment, as if he had a picture of something very pleasant before him. But, when several years passed, and they had no children, his old comforting tone changed to one of irritation.

"Leave me alone," he would cry in an angry, despotical voice, in reply to her complaints of loneliness.

And she would mutter, half to herself, in a voice choking with emotion: "What is the use of talking? Who cares about me?"

Eventually she became very silent, and she earned for herself the nickname of "The Silent Gittel." The neighbours used to say: "What do you expect of Gittel? Words are precious to her. You know that she values them at a high price."

Whenever a woman stopped her in the street to talk with her, Gittel would begin to search her mind for something suitable to say—something outside of herself. In her eyes one could read the words: "Don't you know what my heart is longing for? It is longing for a child." But her lips uttered no the bitterness of her soul to strangers. She she would listen to the woman for a few minutes, then mutter: "A good day to you!" and walk off, rather quickly, as if some important duty were awaiting her elsewhere.

After all, what was there for her to talk about? Folk always talked about themselves and their children. As for the women, they talked more about their children than about themselves.

"My Baselle," one would say, "was born on the Passover eve, in time for the Seder." Whilst a second woman would be sure to add, hurriedly, as if this were her one and only chance of imparting her wonderful piece of news: "My Yossale—may be live a hundred and twenty years! My Yossale was born on Chanukah, the second candle."

What was there in Gittel's life to mark the passage of time? There was not a single landmark in the pathway of her existence. Everything was standing still. Nothing stirred, nothing moved, nothing grew, excepting her own suffering, which kept growing, taking root more strongly and more deeply in her heart from day to day.

Out in the street there were crowds of children, all belonging to other women, whilst she herself was yearning and pining day and night, for the sound of one little voice; for the touch of one little hand. "If only I had some one to talk with," she murmured. "But who cares about me—who cares?" And she wrung her hands.

On one occasion she told Miriam and Basse about her terrible loneliness when her husband was away, and how the nights brought terror to her heart.

"When you are a stranger in a town and alone your heart simply aches," she added, sadly.

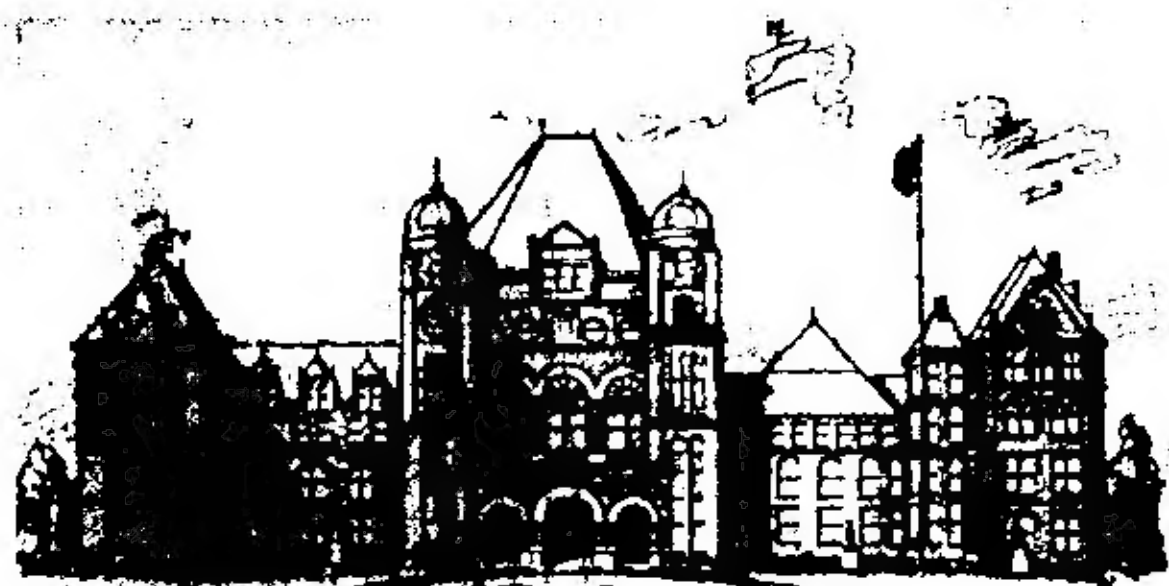

"Woe is me!" cried Miriam. "How can a person live alone, like a stone? I will come to see you, certainly, without a doubt."

But she never came. That is to say, she did come once, on Rosh Hashonah, when Gershon was at home. True, he was in bed, fast asleep when Miriam came. Still, it was not like being entirely alone. If supposing—God forbid!—she were to take ill and cry out for Gershon he would hear her, although he was a very sound sleeper.

Could she ask Miriam and Basse again? Maybe she should kneel at their feet and beg of them to come to see her? Who were they that they should expect her to humble herself in the dust to them?

Gittel suddenly became conscious of the hushed stillness about her. And she shuddered. The eleven empty years, the long-drawn-out ghastly nights she had experienced, and the painful years which were her future—all these stood before her in a ghastly nightmare.

It seemed to her that she was once again dreaming of the child who had never been born to her—the child who was going to be her solace and her companion. At night, lying beside her, she would hear his breathing. And he would be her own—so much her own that no one could ever take him from her. He would grow up to be a great man, a very great man, perhaps like Moses . . . or King Solomon. Who could tell? Certainly he would be unlike any other child in the whole wide world. He would have no equal for wisdom and beauty and personality. Her son! Yes, indeed, her own son! For it was indeed true that the wonders of God are infinite . . . And she, his mother, would be envied by all the mothers in the world. Every single individual who ever heard of her would agree that she was the most wonderful mother the world had ever known. And it would not be without cause, for she would take the most wonderful

Our Heritage

A heritage so rich that few of us have grasped its significance

WE live in a country lavishly endowed with natural riches. In water power, in minerals, in agriculture, in pulpwood—four of the greatest assets a country can possess—Canada leads the world. The stage is set by nature for a development in Canada unparalleled in history.

In the first of a series of booklets dealing with Canada as a field for investment, we have endeavoured to apply the financiers' deliberate analysis to the hard facts and figures of our natural resources.

NORTHERN ONTARIO
CANADA

Northern Ontario, now open for settlement at fifty cents per acre, contains millions of acres of the finest agricultural land in the world. Its resources in lumber, mineral, water power, fish, game and scenery are immense. The land calls for men to cultivate it, and in return will give health, comfort and prosperity.

What settlers say of the soil, climate, farming and forest life, is told in a most attractive booklet issued under the direction of the Honourable John S. Martin, Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. Full instructions in regards to acquiring a title to these rich agricultural lands are also given.

For free copies write: G. A. ELLIOTT, Director of Colonization, Parliament Buildings, Toronto, Ontario. "Please mention this paper."

The wedding of the daughter, February 27, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Godfrey, and Mrs. Clara Godfrey, was solemnized by Rabbi Gordon, assisted by Rabbi Weinreb, officiated. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a gown of ivory satin, the skirt of which was cut in large petals revealing a petticoat of ruffled net. Her veil fell from a cap arrangement held in place by strands of pearls and caught at the sides by knots of orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of lilacs of the valley, white roses and orchids. Miss Rose Bockner was maid of honour and the bridesmaids were Misses Clara Simon and Dolly Levinter. Their gowns were fashioned alike in blue and silver black picture hats were worn and they carried butterfly roses. Miss Merry Rotstein was flower girl wearing pink crepe with bonnet to match and carrying a basket of butterfly roses. The best man was Henry Bockner, brother of the groom, and the ushers, Al Clavir, Jack Godfrey and Ted Sterling. A reception was held at the home of the bride's aunt, Mrs. J. Cohen, 3 Wells Hill Avenue, where the bride and groom received in the bay window of the living room, which was transformed into a bower of roses. Mrs. Godfrey, mother of the bride, wore a gown of black chiffon trimmed with burgundy coloured lace. Mrs. Bockner, mother of the groom, wore a black and gold frock. The couple left to spend their honeymoon in New York and Atlantic City. Travelling the bride wore a black crepe satin frock, black kasha cloth coat trimmed with monkey fur and hat of black felt and satin.

Moscoe-Osborne

At the Men of England Synagogue, Sunday, February 27, Minnie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Osborne, was united in marriage to Herman Moscoe, son of Mr. and Mrs. N. Muscovitch, 313 Palmerston Boulevard. Rabbi Levy, Rabbi Gordon and Rabbi Silverstein performed the ceremony in Hebrew and Rabbi F. M. Isserman in English. The bride, who was given away by her parents, wore white crepe romaine and French panne velvet. Her veil of Brussels net was arranged in Grecian style. Silver shoes were worn and she carried a shower bouquet of butterfly roses and gypsophyllia. Miss Beck Moscoe, sister of the groom, was maid of honour. Mrs. L. N. Haber, sister of the bride, and Misses Rose Kaminker, Mildred Phillips and Dorothy Franks, of Boston, Mass., were bridesmaids. Gertrude Osborne was train-bearer and Mildred Margulies, flower girl. Al Moscoe attended his brother as best man. Lou Haber, Harry Mandell, Harry R. Moscoe and Dave Robinson, of Hamilton, were groomsmen. A reception was held in the Assembly Hall. Cables from London, England, and France were read. Mr. and Mrs. Herman Moscoe left for a honeymoon trip to New York, Philadelphia and Atlantic City, the bride travelling in a gown of blue crepe with flame trimming over which she wore a seal coat. A small felt hat completed her costume. Among those who attended the wedding were Mrs. P. H. Frank and daughter, Dorothy, of Boston, Mass.; Mr. and Mrs. M. Kashin and family, Mr. and Mrs. H. Hyman, Mr. and Mrs. N. Gittles and family, Miss Molly Leff, Harry Barris, Julius Halpern, all of Buffalo; and Dave Robinson, Hamilton.

Skopitz-Slonimsky

At Men of England synagogue, the wedding took place of Belle, daughter of J. Slonimsky, and Irving Skopitz, son of Mr. and Mrs. Chas Skopitz. The marriage was solemnized by Rabbi Levy, assisted by Rev. Dorakind. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore white georgette trimmed with sequins and cut beads. She wore a veil of Brussels net caught with a wreath of orange blossoms, and carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses and lilacs of the valley. Miss Belle Skopitz, sister of the groom, was maid of honour. She wore a dress

LOEW'S

For the first time in motion picture history, a star allows another character to play the title role in his own production, in Buster Keaton's "The General," which comes to Loew's Theatre next Monday. An iron horse of the crinoline days is "The General." In April of 1862 the famous Andrews railroad raid took place at Big Shanty, Ga., and much of the fun in Keaton's new comedy centres upon that basic incident. Buster plays the part of the young engineer, an actual character in history, who was so attached to his iron friend and companion, "The General," that he chased a score of Union dare-devils over burning bridges and torn-up tracks, even inside the Federal lines. Al Moore with his Jolly Tars orchestra will feature the vaudeville programme.

STANDARD THEATRE

The Hollander Troupe will this week-end produce a new play of life as it is, by S. Libin, who is recognized as one of the best authors of the Yiddish-speaking stage. The play is full of sparkling comedy scenes and scenes of life pictures as they are to-day in the larger cities. Hannah and Isidore Hollander in the leading roles supported by the entire cast.

THE "VANCOUVER EXPRESS"

One dictionary defines the word "express," as "to declare; to make known; to put into words; rapid transit or conveyance." To Canadians, with the prefix Vancouver, the word means decidedly more. In addition to rapid transit, "Vancouver Express" means comfort, convenience, quality of cuisine and the acme of personal service.

The fact that this Canadian Pacific through train starts from Toronto gives local patrons the advantage of rapid service to the Pacific Coast without change of cars. It is timed to reach the Western cities at suitable hours and to make convenient connections at Regina and Calgary for Saskatoon and Edmonton, and at Vancouver for Victoria and South Pacific Coast points.

The "Vancouver Express" leaves Toronto Union Station daily at 9.00 p.m. Its service is proven and is the standard of the continent—Canadian Pacific throughout. Whether you travel in the Standard or Tourist sleeping cars, the Compartment-Observation or Colonist car, you are assured that perfection of courteous, efficient attention that identifies all branches of Canadian Pacific service.

Rates, reservations and full information from any Canadian Pacific ticket agent.

RENEWED EXCESSES REPORTED FROM ROUMANIA

The trial of Nicolai Totu, who murdered the Jewish student, David Falik, a few months ago, during an excitement at the High School in a small town in Bukovina, concluded last week, with the acquittal of the murderer. This act of leniency on the part of the court produced a panic among the Jews, many of them suspecting that it would be a signal for renewed excesses and antisemitic activities on the part of the reactionary students. Attacks on Jews in the town where the trial was held were made on the streets immediately after the acquittal became known and public demonstrations arranged by the student body were held in Bucharest and other large cities, expressing the elation of the anti-semites at the result of the trial.

At the same time, prison sentences and monetary fines were imposed on a number of Jews at Piatra-Neamtze, who tried to offer resistance to a band of students who attacked the synagogue there on the last Day of Atonement, the prison sentences ranging from two years to six months and the fines from two million to one million lei.

Encouraged by these events, the anti-semitic student bodies renewed their demand that the numerous clauses be introduced in all Roumanian Universities, that all Jewish professors be dismissed and that the students who were excluded from the universities because of anti-semitic activities should be readmitted. On the other hand, Prime Minister Averescu addressed a letter to Minister of Education, Petrovici, urging the immediate cessation of all antisemitic student activities and that students guilty of excesses be tried before a court-martial.

In reply to Professor Cuz's demand in the Roumanian Parliament that Jewish students should be compelled to attend school on Saturdays, the Minister of Education said that he was very anxious to promote tolerance in religion. He was a Roumanian Minister, he said, representing the Roumanian people but he was also a Minister of a country which had a minority population and he must act with understanding and consideration of that portion of the population.

The Government official organ is continuing to accuse the Jews of spreading false reports in the foreign press against Roumania and demanding that representative Jews repudiate the charges made in the foreign press against the conduct of the Roumanian officials and Government authorities. The same paper, at the same time, admits the occurrence of anti-Jewish excesses in the least of the business section of the capital and threatens the offending students with dire punishment.

The Silent Gittel

care of his little body and teach him the finest and noblest things in the world.

No, her son would never throw stones into windows, nor tear his clothes to pieces in climbing walls. Above all, she would never allow him to be disrespectful to his rebbe. She would impress him so forcibly that he would never forget the greatness of the man who taught the Holy Torah.

If only Basse had taken care of them and taught them as she should have done—would her three boys have been such wild animals? Of course not. The mother can do whatever she likes with her children. And here were scores of mothers all around her who were extremely careless about how their children grew up. All they cared about was their own comfort.

As Gershon, he would undoubtedly respect her, look up to her, because she was the mother of his child, that wonderful boy.

And she herself would no longer feel that she was like a dried-up, barren tree which only encumbered the garden, so to say. Having borne a son, she could look upon herself as the equal of any man, woman or child living.

By-and-by, in many years to come, her son would recite the mourner's prayer after her.

Really, a son was far preferable to a daughter.

A daughter has to be provided with a dowry. And how could poor folks like herself and Gershon hope to save up a comparatively large sum of money, enough for the dowry, the wedding, the outfit, and the marriage-broker as well? And the worst of a daughter is, that after one has reared her up, she marries and leaves her parents. And the son-in-law does not always pay much respect to his parents-in-law.

Since the whole world appreciates a son more than a daughter, then surely one can see that there is good grounds for it.

And Gittel made up her mind that her child would be a son. And she kept making plans for the festive day on which he would arrive—when she would first behold his radiant little face.

Ardently, lovingly, she had been waiting for him for eleven years—in vain. Until at last, hope began to desert her. It seemed to her that her wonderful son had died, inch by inch before her eyes—died before he was born, as it were. Bit by bit the pictures of sunshine and happiness which she had cherished for so many years crumbled away and fell to pieces. And she realized that not only would she never know the love of a child, but also that the affection of her husband was fading out of existence. And despair filled her veins as with lead.

"Father in Heaven," she prayed, "give me a son. Almighty God, why do You punish me so terribly. All the women around me have children and why have I none?"

She dropped her aching head on to the table and wept. Loud and bitter and terrible was the cry which arose from her melancholy soul.

Next door to Gittel lived Hinde, the Lean One. When she heard Gittel's sobs she flew in to her, carrying her youngest child in her arms and leading her three older boys, all hand in hand. Gittel's door was open and she walked straight in to her house, with her little family.

Hearing footsteps Gittel dried her eyes quickly and stood up to face her visitors.

"Good morning, Gittel. God be with you! Why are you crying?" asked Hinde, all in one breath.

"Good morning to you, Hinde," answered Gittel. "I crying? What have I to cry for? What am I short of?" she asked, looking searchingly into Hinde's dull eyes as if expecting to find some understanding in them. "Well, really, say yourself, what am I short of?" she repeated, as her burning eyes rested on the baby boy leaping and crowing in his mother's arms. "Really, what?" But she could not administer the law with justice and equity. Let her have regard for religious freedom. Let her develop tolerance and appreciation for all who worship God, even though their worship seems strange and different. If this were to occur in Roumania, then she would clear her name and right herself in the eyes of the world. But she will get nowhere by attempting to throttle her Jewish leaders. Roumania's reputation is dependent only on her actions and on her policies. When Roumania will repent and refashion her policies, she will regain the goodwill of the world—and in no other way can it be regained.

finish the sentence. She burst into a wild hysterical scream of laughter.

Loud, terrible, fearful was the laughter of Gittel the childless and it fell straight into the face of the mother of the four handsome little boys.

"Because she is better off, she laughs at my poverty, into my very face," said Hinde to herself. The humiliation was too much for her. She bade Gittel a hurried "Good day," and, driving her three little boys in front of her, ran from Gittel's house, closing the door behind her with a loud bang.

"Never, never, never will she see me crossing her threshold again," said Hinde when she was inside her own house again. She put the baby down on the floor and continued talking to herself. "I should like to know why she laughed at me. And another thing—another thing—why was Gittel crying?"—Jewish Exponent

Q.—Was it not an oversight on the part of the Quebec government that two or three young Jewish lawyers in Montreal have not yet been appointed K.C.'s?

Q.—Is it time that the Zionist Director at Montreal has refused to sanction the purchase of Mezuzahs for the doorways of the head office because the cost would increase the percentage of expenditures in Canadian Zionism? A. B. B.

A suit involving a Long Island summer home valued at more than $200,000 was settled in an unusual way in the Supreme Court of Mineola, L.I., when by the agreement of both sides the legal proceedings were dropped and arrangements were made to give the property to St. Joseph's Hospital, Far Rockaway. The estate, the former country home of Isaac D. Levy, President of Oppenheim, Collins & Co., New York, includes a mansion which cost $300,000, set in a plot of five and one-half acres, at Cedarhurst Avenue and Broadway, Cedarhurst, L.I., a greenhouse and other small buildings. It is to be used now as a convalescent home for children, and will be a memorial to Mr. and Mrs. Levy's daughter, Dorothy.

Hundreds of thousands of tons of minerals will have to be brought to a shipping port in Palestine if proposals for the development of the mineral resources of the Dead Sea come to fruition. The natural shipping route for these products is over the line from Beisan to a harbour at Haifa. Sir Herbert Samuel, former High Commissioner of Palestine, made these statements to a Jaffa and Tel-Aviv deputation in February, 1925. Particular significance was thus placed almost two years ago in the recent passing by the British House of Commons of the $22,500,000 loan for Palestine; to be used largely for the construction of a port at Haifa. This action brings the climax to the great work for the improvement of Palestine's transportation system. A port at Haifa, while paving the way for easy connections between Palestine and the world at large, once again focuses attention on the mineral resources of Palestine.

THE SHORT CUT

Every advertisement in your paper is a short cut. Advertisements make it possible to tell you in a few minutes all you want to know about the service or articles you need.

At a glance you can sift what interests you most and in a moment you know just when and where to go for what you want.

Figure how many steps, how much needless walking and talking the advertisements thus save you and your neighbors.

Then you realize the great economy and necessity of advertising in your daily life.
